Also with the cold weather upon us look out for your neighbours. If you see something happening in front of you, phone 999 or else afterwards phone 101. Tales from the Mother Church 18.

As the days grew shorter, and the weather colder, Berry would often prefer not to supervise Richard's outdoor jobs. His office was warm and she would sleep the day away curled up on Oeki. She welcomed him back at lunchtime, and again at 4pm when she 'helped' with the checking of his e mails. Christmas was drawing near, and the workforce helped with the preparations in the Cathedral. The giant Christmas tree was erected at the West End and strung with ropes of white lights which sparkled like diamonds. The flower ladies began the big arrangements at the crossing, and the men helped to lift the buckets of holly and greenery to the required spots. It all made interesting things to watch for the two cats, and the Dean's Chair had a very comfortable blue velvet cushion, in a warm spot on the dais, when they needed a nap.

Richard had made a lightweight, open-fronted shed/stable which was placed half way up the dais steps. A wooden manger filled with straw rested before the open front. At the two children's services on Christmas Eve day, Mary and Joseph would re-enact the story of Christ's birth, with the help of children who came dressed, in costume, to tell the story with them.

Many little girls came dressed as angels. Net curtains, fairy dresses and a lot of tinsel were the order of the day. It nearly always rains on the afternoon of Christmas Eve, so the angels 'stumped' rather than flew up the dais steps, in their wellies. Then it was the turn of the shepherds. The congregation sang, "While shepherds watched their flocks by night", while serious faced boys in an assortment of shepherd-like garments, and the inevitable tea-towel headdresses, took their places on the steps and looked down into the nave.

The story told how Mary and Joseph began the journey to Bethlehem as they slowly made their way up the central aisle. A son of the Close, home from school for the holiday was press-ganged into playing Joseph, while a blushing choir girl made a charming Mary. The baby Jesus was a small pillow well-wrapped in a shawl and firmly swaddled with tape. "O

Stroke support

Imagine some months ago you had a stroke. It was a traumatic experience and has left you with left-sided weakness and speech difficulties. Everyday tasks are arduous, you are unable to drive, and your partner is beginning to realise the implications of life with a stroke survivor.

At home, visits from hospital therapists have now ended, and you are feeling isolated. You do not feel up to re-joining the clubs that you attended before your stroke. You frequently feel exhausted, and also unaccountably emotional from time to time.

It is in this situation that the local stroke support group can offer some help. Winchester Stroke Support Group was set up as a registered charity in 2010, is self-funded and is affiliated to the Stroke Association. It aims to provide a friendly, welcoming group where stroke survivors can get together with experienced volunteers and enjoy conversation over a cup of tea, and various activities.

We meet at St Barnabas' church hall on Monday afternoons from 2 to 4 pm throughout the year, apart from short breaks at Christmas and Easter, and in August. The afternoon usually begins with some seated exercises. Elsie, our Chair, is experienced in tai chi, and a physiotherapist also visits regularly. There is often a theme for the afternoon, such as 'autumn', 'music' or 'sport'. We have a visiting artist and various speakers. Pub lunches are popular, and there is a summer outing. Last year we visited the Hawk Conservancy near Andover and enjoyed the fantastic flying displays. We also organise a Christmas lunch, in recent years at the Royal Winchester Golf Club.

An afternoon away from home gives both member and carer a break, and burdens can seem lighter when shared with others in similar situations. Above all, the group provides a place where members can be listened to sympathetically, and where they can learn new ways of communicating and thus regain lost confidence.

We are looking for both new members and volunteers. For further information, please visit www.winchesterstrokesupport.org.uk or phone Elsie White, 855609, or Jenny Davidson, 852818.

*Jenny Davidson, Secretary
Winchester Stroke Support Group*

little town of Bethlehem" was being sung by the congregation, while the angels and shepherds craned their necks to see the baby placed in the manger.

As Mary lowered the infant Jesus, she came to a stop and said "Oh!" In a surprised voice. Joseph too came to a halt, half-bent over the manger. A little black furry head had come up out of the manger, and two big yellow eyes looked sleepily around. There was a murmur of "Aw" from the watching children as Berry yawned, stepped out of the manger, and sat on the step beside it.

Baby Jesus went into the warm nest of straw, and the story continued. The Kings or Magi, were the easiest to dress and cardboard crowns of all descriptions graced the occasion. "And here come the Kings", announced the Dean, "Enough for a football team and a few reserves." The congregation swung into a lusty rendition of "We, three Kings of Orient are", and the multiplicity of sumptuously dressed royalty began their long journey down both aisles, around the back of the dais and up the steps to the very top. They are part of the story, but came later, and so stood away from the angels and shepherds.

Berry decided that she had had her five minutes of fame, and jumping easily down the steps disappeared under Bishop Harold Browne's tomb.

Finally, to the strains of "O Come all ye Faithful," all the citizens of Bethlehem, anyone who wanted to sit upon the dais, came to see the baby. The bright lights shone on the children, and the gloom of a winter afternoon was banished by the encompassing pillars. The children were caught up in the moment of something not yet understood, and yet, no understanding was needed as they gazed wide-eyed. How much would they remember when childhood was left behind? The colour, the music, the story?

Or would they remember, only, the little black cat that had warned the manger for the Christ Child?

Happy Christmas, Berry. Happy Christmas everyone!

Chris Tulk
